Anson Group adds Beth Ann Thomas Klotz as a Senior Regulatory Consultant

(Indianapolis, Indiana) June 24, 2011 The Anson Group announces today the addition of Beth Ann Thomas Klotz, PhD, as a Regulatory Consultant. Dr. Thomas Klotz has worked for more than 10 years in the pharmaceutical industry, most recently with Eli Lilly and Company, where she focused in particular on pharmaceutical regulatory affairs and bioproduct research and development.

At Lilly, Dr. Thomas Klotz was responsible for development of regulatory strategy and agency interactions for early- to mid-phase clinical development projects, with a particular emphasis on oncology. She led regulatory strategy development and execution for clinical trials and registration pathways for drug development teams.

In addition to her experience in regulatory affairs, Dr. Thomas Klotz provided leadership and analytical support for bioproduct development activities, including development and qualification/validation of analytical methods in support of toxicology studies and clinical trials. She led multi-functional CMC teams in facilitating project requirements for early and late-phase development activities, including leadership for collaborations with Quality Assurance teams to ensure that drug development and commercialization requirements were met, and working with external alliance partners.

"Beth has a unique background in both combination products and CM&C and oncology drug development," states President and CEO Colleen Hittle. "Anson is fortunate to have someone with her skill set available to help address our clients regulatory challenges."
